Staffan Svensson became involved with HAI in 1992. 1992. He has a long-standing interest in rational drug use, drug promotion and side-effects. He graduated in medicine, specialized in clinical pharmacology and then started working in family medicine. His dissertation was on the topic of decision-making and side-effects in relation to antihypertensive drugs. He currently has a post-doctorate post at Göteborg university in Sweden and also works as a scientific supervisor in family medicine. His contribution as a board member rests on in-depth clinical and scientific background, as well as experience of previous NGO work.