

Clinical trials in developing countries

HAI Europe Open Seminar
21 November 2008

Annelies den Boer

Ski where the snow is!

Discover Russia for conducting clinical research!

Billion dollar clinical research opportunity lies in India!

Dr. Amar Jessani

Many doctors in India involved in clinical trials are given enormous sums of money for recruiting patients. This leads to a conflict of interests, of which the patients are the victims. When they find they need medical attention, the financial obstacles they encounter tempt them to close their eyes to the possible risks of clinical trials.'

- Tests increasingly carried out in low income countries
- Popular destinations; Eastern Europe, Asia and Latin America
- Often medicines destined for consumption in lucrative Western Markets

Cheap

Fast

Easy

Scale of CT outside US/ W.Europe

No universal registration system

Scientists: 30 - 40 %

Big pharma: 30 - 70%

NGO's: more CRO's

Estimate SOMO: 18.000- 24.000 CTs

Why be concerned?

No access

Conflicts of interest

Insufficient supervision

Protection of participants

Declaration of Helsinki

Violations by Pfizer, Occam, Astra Zeneca

What to do?

CT Watch

Lobby against market authorisation in EU

Capacity building

Compulsory and public registration

European bottlenecks

Lack of implementation of EU directives

Medicines agencies: 'It is not in our system'

Change?

13 MEP's support position Wemos

Dutch MP's questioned Minister

New study and call for ethical trials